

This quarter's focus on Self-Discipline, Integrity, and Responsibility reflects the values that quietly shape both individuals and institutions. Self-discipline is the foundation on which excellence is built; Neeraj Chopra's journey from a small town athlete to a world champion was defined less by talent and more by years of focused, disciplined training that made peak performance look effortless. Integrity turns personal conviction into public trust; when Narayana Murthy chose transparency, fairness, and ethical clarity as the cornerstones of Infosys, he proved that doing the right thing consistently can create enduring institutions. Responsibility is where personal growth meets collective good; PV Sindhu's conduct on and off the court—grace in victory, accountability in setbacks, and dedication to representing the nation—exemplifies how individual actions can inspire collective pride. Together, these values are not seasonal themes—they are the threads that, when lived daily by students, parents, and staff, weave a culture of character, trust, and shared purpose.

Warm regards,
Ritu Khandelwal

POEM

Within these walls, our dreams take flight,
Each day begins with morning light.
With books and pens, we start our quest,
To learn, to grow, to do our best.

Teachers guide with patient
grace,
Knowledge shines in every face.
Laughter rings in halls so wide, Our school will always be our pride.

Trilok Yadav

The breeze that dances through the trees,
The song of birds, the hum of bees.
The earth speaks softly, calm and kind,
A message clear for all mankind.

Protect her beauty, guard her
grace,
Keep green alive in every place.
For when we care, the world will show,
A brighter, cleaner tomorrow will grow.

When at Crossroads

What do I do?
When I have to make a choice Should I be more practical Or listen to my heart's voice

I'm standing at Crossroads Thinking which way to lead Maybe 'the road less travelled by'
Just isn't meant for me

What do I do when,
With my dilemma I'm all alone Should I listen to the silence Or should I explore the unknown

All I do is,
Pour my heart out into pages
And then I notice
That there's the answer in my phrases

All that ink in my diary
All the words I've been writing
They tell me the secrets
My soul has been hiding

They tell me that To make a choice, I should find myself first Because to find the true you
Is what life's really worth.

FOES

The lies and the trust,
Now the cell has burst.
Confused between things as a lost fly in a tangled web,
That was feb.
They say to deal with ways, are these the days?
The days I saw for me to be myself are slowly turning to black,
Like there's a secret trap
The trap of my mind is deep as the seas of pacific I wonder who will beep the specific.
The beep that will ease my mind from the chaos, The chaos of critics, liars, doubters, blamers, haters, supporters, foes
And at last me and the world.
Weather it is us and the world or the only world
I'm done without murmuring the word to the nerd.
Leesha.

BETWEEN FALLING AND FLYING

Between falling and flying
A line so thin stands rigid and fine
To fall
To fly
It distinguishes both Visible when you decide You can or you cannot It merely goes up or down as you fear to fall on ground
It moves a bit to the side of left When you think you can be next It shuts quiet standing or lying As they see you growing and flying and when you abandon mockery and laugh
The line would break Break in half
But a bitter truth says
Between falling and flying
A line so thin stands rigid
and fine

Summer tests us harsh and bright Winter freezes joy and pain Rain then washes every stain
And spring return smile and hope again

Too much heat can burn your mind Too much cold can pause your spark Just like the seasons, problems pass So stay prepared for light and dark

Each season speaks in its own way
That nothing in life will forever stay Prepare your heart like we do for the skies For storms may come , but so do sun rise
